

EDITORIAL

Dear Researcher and Reader,

Started in 2023, we are happy to be publishing the second issue of BAU Health and Innovation Journal. We would like to thank all the academic and technical team who contributed to the meeting of the journal with the readers from the intellectual formation process to the day of publication. Of course, we would like to express our gratitude to our authors who prepared and submitted their scientific studies that require intensive labour on this path, and to our valuable reviewers who shared their experiences and kind opinions to contribute to the field by turning these studies into a qualified scientific study.

BAU Health and Innovation Journal accepts publications from all branches of health sciences and aims to be an interdisciplinary journal that aims to publish all innovative studies that intersect, integrate and offer new perspectives. In this direction, original researches, review articles and case studies are also published in our journal. In this issue, 4 original research articles, 2 review articles, 1 case report and 1 letter to the editor were included. All published articles were firstly pre-checked by the field editor, then examined by reviewers who are experts in their fields, and the referee reports were accepted for publication by the editorial board and the process was completed by sending them to the relevant authors for revision.

We believe that the issue, which we prepared with the excitement of learning and sharing, will contribute to the field of science and we look forward to your articles in the coming period.

Sincerely,

Assoc. Prof. Dr. Gökçen Garipoğlu
