

EDITORIAL

Dear Readers,

We are pleased to share with you the 2022 Issue 4 (Volume 19, Issue 4, December 2022) of the Journal of Education and Research in Nursing.

To increase the quality of nursing care, to improve care outcomes, to make a difference in patient care outcomes, to standardize nursing care, to increase nurse satisfaction, to make effective and correct decisions, to solve clinical problems, to innovate practices, to minimize application errors and to achieve excellence in the health system, it is vital and necessary that nursing practice is evidence-based. In this context, research should be conducted and published in line with scientific and ethical principles. In order for a study carried out in accordance with scientific and ethical principles to be published in a qualified journal, the article should have the feature of 3 C (Clarity, Conciseness and Correctness); repetition, ambiguity and exaggeration should not be included in the article; the main axis of the study should not be deviated; standard rules should be followed; the article should be written according to the writing instructions stated in the journal; the most appropriate journal should be selected; there should be a problem definition including the reason for the study, its difference from similar studies and which gap it will fill for the relevant country; information about the research questions or hypothesis should be mentioned; professional support from a statistician should be sought; the article should be checked for language before submission and submitted to only one journal. In this context, together with the rapid increase in the number of national and international scientific publications, it is important to meticulously use the current and best published evidence in combination with clinical expertise for providing quality nursing care.

I am pleased to announce that our journal is indexed in the databases of Tubitak Ulakbim Medicine (2012), EBSCO (2017), CINAHL (2017), DOAJ (2021), and GALE (2022), CNKI (2022) and we are working to publish our journal within the framework of international academic publishing standards. The studies with a high level of evidence from you have been instrumental in achieving these goals, and we know how important the valuable contributions of our journal's stakeholders, our readers, editors, managing director and advisory board members are.

As for our December 2022 issue, a total of 15 studies, including nine valuable original studies and five reviews and one case report are presented in this issue. The titles of the articles are as follows:

The original articles are titled "Exposure of Pregnant Women to Chemicals and Cosmetic Products", "Burnout and Psychological Resilience in Nurses: A Structural Equality Modeling", "The Effects of Upright Positions in the Second Stage of Labor on Perineal Trauma and Infant Health: A Systematic Review and Meta-Analysis", "A Retrospective Examination of Symptoms Experienced by Patients Diagnosed with Lymphoma, Reasons for Hospital Admission, Hospitalization, and Hospital Treatments", "Nurses' Images of the Nursing Profession and Their Caring Behaviors", "Health Anxiety Level and Health-Promoting and Protective Behaviors of Nursing Students", "The Safety Measures Against Home Accidents of Mothers of 0-6 Age Group Children and Related Factors", "Investigation of Hope, Social Support Level, Relationship and Affecting Factors in Patients with Gynaecological Cancer", and "Guide to Coping with the Fear of Birth".

The review articles are titled "Seeing the Unseen: A Review on Experiences of Preterm Infants' Fathers", "Women's Health Nursing in Traditional and Complementary Medicine Practices", "A Guideline for Reporting and Assessment of Health Interventions Using Mobile Phones", "Use of Traditional and Complementary Medicine Methods in Children: Is It Effective and Safety?", and "Agalsidase Alpha & Agalsidase Beta Effect in Fabry Disease".

The case report article is titled "Postoperative Nursing Care of a Patient Who Had the JATEN Procedure: A Newborn Case Report".

I would like to express my endless thanks to our authors who have contributed to presenting the updated information obtained from the results of their studies to our readers in order to provide quality and safe nursing care services to society, to the members of the editorial board who has contributed to the publication of our journal, and to the members of the advisory board who has carefully evaluated each article.

"Nursing is an art. And if it is to be made an art, it requires an exclusive devotion as hard a preparation as any painter's or sculptor's work." Florence Nightingale
